SUCCESSFULLY AGING AND LIVING IN SAN ANTONIO (SALSA)

Robust community relationships, skilled facilitation, and a depth of quality research and data supported the launch of the SALSA initiative in 2016. Participation was high and the community’s shared commitment to caring for our aging population was evident. Driven by basic demographics and an overriding desire to impact quality of life outcomes, community partners met often and passionately to begin a collective impact process; intended to forever change how we think about growing older and how we care for our older community in Bexar County.

BACKGROUND

Recognizing that Bexar County is expecting dramatic growth in its older adult population—an almost doubling in size in the next 20 years, followed by similar growth rates through at least the year 2050, provided the impetus for the San Antonio Area Foundation (the Area Foundation) to create Successfully Aging and Living in San Antonio, or SALSA. The Area Foundation explored 14 potential focus areas and conducted more than 50 community interviews and extensive research into three areas (child welfare, cradle to career, and senior welfare). Its conclusion: the older adult population in the San Antonio area is growing dramatically, and vulnerable subgroups within it are falling through the cracks.

The aim of SALSA is to create a stronger community where seniors thrive and are prized as vital citizens. Given the scope of the initiative’s goal, the Area Foundation committed to partnering with community leaders from the non-profit, public, and private sectors to ensure long-lasting and sustainable impact on the San Antonio area.

In March of 2016, Moriarty Consulting Group (“MCG”) responded to the Area Foundation’s request for proposals to support SALSA and in May of 2016 began the process of using the collective impact framework to convene and facilitate stakeholders that serve, impact, and influence outcomes for the older adult population.

INITIATIVE LAUNCH

On June 10, 2016, the SALSA initiative officially launched with a convening of 31 individuals, representing 25 stakeholder organizations. Participants quickly expressed energy and commitment to the initiative’s premise. Collective Impact (“CI”), the commitment of a group of actors from different sectors to a common agenda for solving a specific social problem using a structured form of collaboration, was presented as the initiative’s framework. Several participants shared the following learnings from their experience with CI:

- The process takes longer than you expect and requires significant commitment
- It is important to continue to have leadership from each organization represented
- You must commit to the process
- It’s not about you
- Work is done by the people at the table
- Reward for organizations:
 - Emerging leadership
 - Builds industry capacity
 - Builds training
 - Great data for all
 - Improved quality
- Level of discussion and trust improves over time – becomes tougher and more respectful
- All agencies learn from each other, regardless of size

DATA SCANS

Much of the work of the group over the five meetings held between the end of June and October focused on existing data and reports on the demographics and needs of the area’s older population, with presentations from CI:Now, the City of San Antonio Department of Human Services, AARP, and Dr. Lloyd B. Potter, Ph.D., Texas State Demographer. In addition to the outward focus on data, participating organizations created a summary of their own primary services, geographic focus and client definitions, lending weight to a robust conversation supporting the need to collaborate more strategically to better serve the growing older adult population.

Through meetings rich in data and conversation, the group's commitment to work as collaborators not competitors emerged in a spirit of inclusivity. The group articulated the need to slow down and dive deep into data to inform and guide the work.

The group's desire to improve and sustain "quality of life" for older adults became the defining focus for the creation of work groups and the community interview process. As the work continues to unfold, it was agreed that other key elements of the focus of the work will need to be more clearly defined:

- What do we mean by "senior services"?
- How do we agree on terminology? Is "senior" ageist? Is "older adult" more universally accepted?
- Will we expand or contract our focus with Bexar County defined as the initial geographic scope?
- Will we define age parameters as our common agenda and work together unfolds?

WORK GROUPS

An August brainstorming session focused on the question: "What are the key elements to maintaining and enhancing quality of life for our older adult population?" The resulting dialogue was the creation of four work groups focused on the following outcome areas:

- Transportation
- Housing and Built Environment
- Caregiver Support and Service Providers
- Socialization/Engagement and Health, Nutrition, and Wellness

Each work group is populated by 6 to 21 members, representing diverse partner organizations. Work groups met three times between September and December. Recognizing setbacks and challenges in supporting the older adult population grounded the work group discussions while an articulation of future opportunities was framed and built on an acknowledgement and appreciation of community accomplishments and assets. In 2017 work groups will conduct research in order to refine and focus the four outcome areas.

COMMUNITY CONVERSATIONS

Seeking the voice of our older adults is critical to ensuring equity and inclusion in the collective impact framework. Community conversations took several forms, including the Elder Summit underwritten by the San Antonio Area Foundation -organized by the Sisters of the Incarnate Word, and supported by SA2020 and the Moriarty Consulting Group. On November 4th, over 100 older adults participated in conversations about what it means to live life to the fullest as

2017 GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

- Form and convene SALSA Steering committee comprised of 10-12, multi-sector leaders who will be responsible for determining SALSA's governing infrastructure and steering the goals and direction of the working groups.
- Convene four SALSA workgroups: Transportation; Housing and Built Environment; Caregiver Support and Service Providers; and Socialization/Engagement, Health, Nutrition and Wellness monthly to research and focus SALSA's collective goals, visions, strategies and shared metrics.
- Conduct and publish research that makes the case for SALSA's collective goals, visions, strategies and shared metrics.
- Finalize SALSA's collective goals, visions, strategies and shared metrics.
